BOOTS AND SHOES.

J. GEORGE'S, Citizens, Military, and Naval Boot, Shoe and Gaiter Manu-facturer, 2115 Pennsylvania ave., would invite attention to his large stock of BOOTS, SHOES and GAITERS, of his own manufacture, the material and work-manship of which are equal to the best custom work, and which he offers on terms favorable to purchasers, particularly to those who appreciate a good article. Having made the fitting of the feet a study, his work does not produce corps or hunjons: study, his work does not produce corns or banions; and those afflicted with sore feet will find relief by wearing the articles which he manufactures. He gives each purchaser a box of his patent leather preserver and water proof Oil Composition, without charge.

The Exciting Scenes in the Senate. THE PERSONAL PASSAGE BETWEEN SENATORS

CONKLING AND GORDON. The excitement of the hour in this city today is the bellicose attitude of Semator Gordon. of Georgia, and Senator Conkling, of New York, toward each other, brought about by some lively personalities indulged in at yesterday's executive session of the Senate. It appears that the nomination of E. C. Wade to be a collector of internal revenue for one of the Georgia districts was under consideration. Senators Gordon and Hill both plead with the Senate to reject the nominee, because, as they alleged. Wade had been the author of many kuklux stories set afloat calculated to defame the south, and that he was unpopular in the section of the country to which his duties, if centirmed, assigned him. SENATORS BLAINE AND GORDON Senator Blaine said that the result of Concressional investigations had proved in nearly every instance that the kuklux reports were of a graver and more serious nature than at first represented.

Senator Gordon then made an eloquent final appeal for the rejection of Wade. He said that the courtesy of the Senate should be tended to himself and his colleague, Mr. Gill both of whom represented the state in which the appointment was made, and they were o the decided opinion that the nomination was not a good one, and was of a character calculated to offend rather than conciliate the people of Georgia. Senator Blaine, in reply, said that it came with ill-grace for the Georgia Senators to request the courtesy of the Senate, inasmuch as

In reply to this Senator Gordon said that the New York Senators were divided in the matter of their appointments, and that the demo-crats could not well follow the lead of both the Senators. After some further discussion Ward's nomi nation was confirmed, and the Senate pro-

neither of them had accorded any such privi-

Gordon was anxious to have read a report made by the committee on commerce with reference to the appointment of one Smith, collector at Mobile. He very persistently pressed his desire, and it is said charged that Senator Spencer had suppressed the re-port. While discussion upon this point was under way, Senator Conkling, without rising in his seat, said in a tone loud enough to be heard throughout the chamber, "Oh, let us go on with the calendar." Senator Gordon, hear-ing the remark, replied:—"See how the New York Senator dictates to the Vice Presi dent how business shall be proceeded with. Conkling having his attention called to this remark, requested the Georgia Senator to repeat it. Gen. Gordon thereupon the second time said, "See how the New York Senator dictated the manner in which the Senate shall proceed with business." The words were no sooner uttered than Mr. Conkling arose and said, "If the gentleman from Georgia assumes to say that I am dictating the business of the Senate, he says that which is not true." Gen. Gordon, quite excitedly, retorted: "We will

At this juncture Senator Thurman, realizing the gravity of the situation, made a speech and threw himself into the breach as a peace-maker. He gave both the opportunity to recede from their positions by assuming that the Senators misunderstood each other, and that neither meant to be discourteous. The speech, though well meant as basis for a settlement of the difficulty, feil short of its mark, inasmuch as both Senators, though they gave it respect-ful attention, remained silent. Senator Ham-lin said that he had often made the remark,

"go ahead with the calendar," and felt assured that Senator Conkling meant no dictation. The two belligerent Senators still remained silent, and the matter dropped. Up to a late hour last night Senator Gordon was closed in his room at Willard's hotel. His colleague, Senator Lamar, who is his confiden-tial adviser in the matter, remained with him until after midnight, and the air was full of rumors that a challenge was in course of pre-paration. General Gordon stated that he did not care to talk about the matter; that it was divulging the secrets of an executive session. which his honor forbid him to reveal. He said, however, "I don't like to talk about these personal matters; but of course there is a way to settle them." He did not intimate what the i an executive

FORTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

SATURDAY, December 15.

SENATE.-During the reading of the Journal at 12:53 o'clock the Clerk of the House appeared before the bar of the Senate with sundry enrolled bills, which were laid before the Senate at the conclusion of the reading of the Journal, and signed by the Vice President.

At 1 o'clock Mr. Conover said that the order of yesterday directed the Vice President to adjourn the Senate immediately after the reading of the Journal, but he asked that the Senate regain in session till the committee or Senate remain in session till the committee on enrolled bills could make a report. So or-

Mr. Cockrill said he had intended to offer a resolution to the memory of his late colleague, Mr. Bogy: but it had been thought best to de fer it, and he gave notice that he should sub-mit such a resolution on the 16th of January

Mr. Butler submitted a resolution that the committee on privileges and elections be instructed to inquire into any threats or con-tempt, influence or bargains, or any other questions connected with the action of any Senator pending the motion to discharge the committee on privileges and elections from further consideration of the credentials of M. C. Butler, and that they have power to send r persons and papers. He said the resolution as substantially the same as the one offered Mr. Edmunds in the Patterson case, while the motion to discharge was pending, and he was desirous—yes, almost demanded—that the investigation should take place. He also asked that the article in the N. V. Tribune, read by Mr. Edmunds, should also be referred to the same committee for investigation. He asked for the immediate consideration of the

Messrs, Cameron, of Wisconsin, and Morrill Mr. Bayard said the introduction of the resolution was in accordance with the understanding made yesterday,

He said he should vote for it because the matter was brought in here by the Senator from Vermont. Otherwise he should oppose it, for he was opposed to getting up investiga-tions on every newspaper article that might appear. He said if the twelve Apostles were members of this body they would not escape stander and calumny der and calumny. Mr. Cameron.—'One of them would. Mr. Blaine said he had seen too much of these agreemen's not to know that they were liable to any amount of misunderstanding, and he sometimes thought best that no agreement of this nature should be made. He said Mr. Butler had probably gained all he could by the introduction of the resolution, for he had shown his willingness to have the matter in vestigated. But he said that debate might spring up here which, though not tech-nically cailed business, might be vastly more important than business, and in that much it would be an infraction of the argreement made. Even now, he said, all this debate was going on with Mr. Edmunds absent, and he was one of the interested parties. He suggested that perhaps the Senator from South Carolina would be content to stop right where it was. Mr. Butler said he was perfectly content to let it stop where it was, but it was not only marvelously strange but marvelously unjust to refuse the passage of the resolution after he had been so arraigned. He was not responsible for the matter being brought in here, and he was not responsible for the ab-Scree of Mr. Edmunds. Discussion continued for some time, when Mr. Thurwan moved that the doors of the Senate be closed. So ordered, and at 2:08 the galleries were cleared and the doors were

HOUSE.-There was a larger attendance in the House this morning than was expected, as it was understood that a very large number of members had left for their homes. Those who intended to leave last night and this morning were compelled either to remain or to bear the responsibility, if democrats, of the defeat of the resolution for investigations; or if republicans, of allowing it to pass in consequence of their absence. As it was understood on the republican side that the democrats press the resolution reported by Mr. Wood, from the ways and means committee, the gaining of time was a great desideratum, and hence, in reading the journal, Mr. Hale de-manded the reading of the names on all the roll calls had yesterday. The reading of the journal was concluded at A number of gentlemen rose to offer bills, when Mr. Covert demanded the regular order. Mr. Wood said he supposed the unfinished business was the resolution offered yesterday.

The Speaker replied affirmatively.

Mr. Conger contended that the unfinished business of yesterday was the call of the House, which was ordered The Speaker remarked that as the House had immediately adjourned, all proceedings under the call dropped. The business in order, therefore, was the resolutions offered by Mr. Wood. He had rules read for the purpose of sustaining his ruling.

Messrs. Conger and Hale each made points of order that Mr. Wood's resolution was not really the unfinished business, because it was never really before the House in a parliamentary sense; for, as soon as it was offered, points of order were made on it. Mr. Sayler contended that the resolution was properly before the House in every parlia-mentary sense. The questions of order did not affect the business of the House, and the only question now was whether the House would go into committee of the whole and consider Mr. Wood's resolution. Mr. Conger said that he had made a privi-leged motion before Mr. Wood made his mo-tion; and, after that, Mr. Page interposed a motion to adjourn. Mr. Wood's motion was not, therefore, properly before the House. If this thing was to be put through under the rules, let it be done; if it was to be put through by force, the House should know it. The Speaker said the gentleman had no right to make such a remark.

After a long discussion Mr. Wood moved to commit the resolution to the committee of the whole, and that all debate thereon be limited to five minutes. The vote on commitment was taken by a division. The republicans ab-stained from voting, and the Speaker an-nounced 95 votes in the affirmative—not a quorum. Fillibustering was in progress when our report closed.

HARRISBURG, PA., Dec. 14.—An old man and wife were murdered in a thinly populated locality of Snyder county, Pa., a few nights ago, and their bodies consumed by fire. an entry, for about twenty years. Their occupation was telling fortunes, and by this means they accumulated considerable money, much of which they had secreted about the building.

THE EASTERN CONFLICT. The Porte to the Powers.

London Dec. 15.—A Constantinople dispatch to the Daily Telegraph says: The circular note dispatched by the Porte to the signataries of the treaty of 1871, commences by the statement that the origin of the present important events is perfectly known. The important events is perfectly The Porte has shown a desire for improvement by reorganizing the judicial system and de-vising reforms without distinction of race or religion, according to the constitution, which had everywhere been well received. Partial reform of no avait. The adoption of improve-ments in one part of the empire only would be premium to other communities to revolt. Any doubt as to the execution of these reforms should disappear before the solemn declarations the Porte now makes. A state of war simply retards such reforms, and is dis-astrous to the country generally; de-stroying agricultural interests, killing industry, and ruining financial reorganizations. Independently of these arrangements for reform, what reason can there be for continuing the war? Russia has declared that she is not animated by a spirit of conquest. The military honor of both sides must be abundantly satisfied. What object can there be in prolonging a contest ruinous to both countries? The moment has arrived for the belligerent powers to accept peace without affecting their dignity. Europe might now usefully interpose her good offices since the Porte is ready to come to terms. and is still prepared to fight in its own defense It is ready, moreover, to sacrifice all for the independence and integrity of the fatherland but the Porte is desirous to stop the further effusion of blood, and therefore appeals to the feelings of justice which must animate the great powers, hoping that they-will receive these overtures favorably.
